

About The Corona Virus Pandemic and How The Lockdown and The Restriction Of Movement Has Affected Nigerians.

Corona Virus Disease

Corona Virus Disease is a contagious acute respiratory infection caused by a new strain of the Corona virus, which is also known as COVID-19.

COVID-19 is transmitted primarily from human to human as well as from animal to human. It can be transferred by a simple handshake or touch as well as through our body waste and breathing. but it can be prevented by proper social distancing and regular washing of hands and by avoiding touching ones face frequently. There is no proper vaccine or treatment for this pandemic, so one has to be careful which leads us to the lockdown and restraintment of movement.

The Lockdown And How It Has Affected Nigerians.

Economically

The Lockdown has affected Nigerians economically since all Banks, factories and various other businesses have been shut due to the lockdown caused by the pandemic. It has these lead to a great fall in the economy system. Since most businesses, factories and organisations are on hold. However hospitals, pharmacies and other places whose essential goods and services are required are not shut down but are still working in order to provide the essential goods and services needed by individuals.

during the lockdown.

Religiously

The lockdown has affected every religious body as all places of worship has been locked and told not to function for the time been due to the pandemic which requires social distancing which leads to the lockdown. So this is how it has affected religiously, since all churches, mosques and other places of worship have been locked down.

Hungers

The lockdown has led to hunger. Since some individuals cannot work and earn money, they have no food to eat which has led to hunger for some individuals.

Educationally

The lockdown has also affected all schools and bodies of education. Since no school is able to function it has affected the school calendar. For example; it has affected the WAEC and NECO examinations and other school extra curricular activities. which will lead to a lot of work and pressure on students once the lockdown is over and schools resume.

These are ways in which the lockdown and restraintment of movement has affected Nigerians.
