

Spatial interaction is a general term which is used to cover any movement in space which results from a human process. This includes commuting to work, migration, information, and the flow of goods. These interactions may assume various forms, such as displacements or flows of goods and information.