

Maltase at a temperature of 15

The glucose is then converted into alcohol at a constant temperature of 15°C in the presence of an enzyme called zymase which is contained in the yeast.

