

2. Computer Engineering

In computer Engineering there might be issues lead to the implementation of the force Majeure clause, they are;

1. Nationwide blackout - this can cause problems for computer engineers in the sense that most of their work is done with electricity and it can hinder the progress and make them fall behind in the time agreed for the contract to be completed.
- 2 . Death of a skilled individual - In the team of contractors there are usually individuals that have special skills that can't be performed by others in the team, so this might cause serious issues in the contract team and may cause delay in the progress of the project.