

IBANGA UTIBEABASI GODWIN

MBBS

MEDICINE AND HEALTH SCIENCES

GST 122

19/MHS01/184

THE BENEFITS OF PARENTAL GUIDIANCE

Parental guidance is the act of guiding your child by explaining the reasons, pros and cons of their actions and decisions. No enforcement is involved. Parents' guide a child's life by providing special time and making a child feel valued. Parental guidance boosts child abilities and strength. Children need guidance and support to have a better transition in adulthood. Constant communication is really important to maintain a good relationship with your children. Father and mother play important roles in our mental, physical, social, financial and career development. Parents are the most precious gift of God to their children. They help their children in every step of their life' they train them in a very hard style for the future challenges. In the development of the child, the play many roles as it will help the child.

The family is the primary social institution one is born into. In this context, parents include biological and adoptive parents, guardians and custodial parents. A child comes into this in the form of clear state and acquires everything through its life spans. Primary knowledge of what is right and what is wrong are learnt through the parent's instructions and advice from a very young age thus, parental guidance creates a less intimidating, less confusing world for your teen, as you are able to answer his/her question. Parents can also help guide their teen to make smart choices.

Below is the benefits/importance of parental guidance:

They act as counselors. Parents can provide emotional guidance and support when they are dealing with some difficult issues. Are parents supposed to be there for their kids? Are parents supposed to guide their own kids in the right path? The answer is yes. Parents have many jobs to do in their lives like taking care of the children, working to support the family and mostly being role models to their children. Parents after learning a lot from their mistakes, advices their children of the mistakes they once made and tell their children how to prevent them.

Parents provide practical guidance. Parents can teach their children practical things so that whenever they are faced with any situation, they know how to face it. Examples of these practical things maybe skills like cooking, making a cup of tea, paying an online bill or tying of shoelaces. Children in return, should never be afraid to ask their parents for help with anything. No issue is too big or small.

They also provide moral guidance. A child who has benefited from parental guidance will be morally upright. Parents provide moral guidance to their children to help them differentiate right from wrong, good from bad. Parents empower their kids to make them feel like they know what the right thing is and that they have motivation and confidence. This is something that is best done from an early age. That way, it becomes part of them and they find it easier to be normally upright as adults.

They educate their children. Under parent's guidance, their children learn things which include; literacy skills and counting. Even if parents do not home school their children, they send them to school and guide their education to the very end. One example of how they do this is by encouraging their children to do their assignments.

From all the points stated above, one can tell that different parenting forms exist and each have advantages and disadvantages. Parental guidance is so important in many aspect of our life. Most of us still rely on our parents for guidance, advice and the rest. Therefore, parental guidance is a strong pillar that must be set in every child's bringing.