

REVIEW OF CHAPTER 8: CITIZEN'S ROLE IN A DEMOCRACY

The term citizen has an inherently political meaning that involves certain type of relationship between the people and government. Citizenship of a state may be acquired either by birth or by naturalization. The process by which an individual may voluntarily change his/her citizenship of a state to another state is known as denaturalization.

Chapter III, Section 25(1a) of the constitution of the Federal Republic of Nigeria define citizenship as:

- a) Every person born in Nigeria before the date of independence, either of whose parents or any of whose grandparents belongs or belonged to a community indigenous to Nigeria; provided that a person shall not become a citizen of Nigeria by virtue of this Section if neither of his parents nor any of his grandparents was born in Nigeria;
- b) Every person born in Nigeria after the date of independence either of whose parents or any of whose grandparents is a citizen of Nigeria; and
- c) Every person born outside Nigeria either of whose parents is a citizen of Nigeria.

Citizenship can be perceived to be made up of three be divided into civil citizenship, political citizenship and social citizenship. Civil citizenship refers to the rights necessary to protect individual liberty; political citizenship is associated with participation in the democratic exercise of political power, either as a member of a political community or as an individual elected by the members of such a community; and social citizenship embodies the claim that citizens ought to have access to those resources that allow them to live a civilized existence in accordance with the standards prevailing in society.

Democracy or representative government is associated with the free discussion of political issues, the right to differ concerning them and the